About the College

Sir Chhotu Ram Govt. College for Women, Sampla (Rohtak) is situated in Garhi Sampla, the holy birthplace of Sir Chhotu Ram-a Prophet of backwards and downtrodden on Delhi highway No. 10, on route to Dighal via Sampla By pass, on the huge premises of 15 acres near the Rest House of P.W.D. Sampla. The greenery around, peaceful surroundings and the transport facilities give to the college a nomenclature 'Shanti Niketan'. It is situated on the main Beri Road, just adjoining National Highway (NH 10) on its way from Delhi to Fazilka via Hisar, Sirsa, and is just 40 km from the national capital Delhi. Rohtak is the oldest district of Haryana and Sampla is the oldest town of the district Rohtak. Basically, Sampla town belongs to a rural background and there were no Government College for Higher education girls before 2000 in the nearby area. Considering the need of area, the Government took the initiative to start a Government College for girls in the year 2000 and named it after the iconic figure and great freedom fighter Sir Chhotu Ram for imparting higher education to the girls of the area. This college started its first session with 34 girl students in the art faculty. The strength of girl students increased year by year and today the number of girl students is in three faculties (Arts, Science, and Commerce), The college has reached the peak of higher education by starting PG courses in the subject of Hindi, History and Geography with a good number of girl students and it is also expected from DGHE to start more PG classes for girls in the next session. It shows how the college is running successfully in the field of higher education and women empowerment. The college has the distinction of being one of the best colleges in the Rohtak district. The college started in October 2000 with two single block buildings donated by the town Panchayat. Keeping in view the increasing strength of girls year by year the Haryana government constructed a new building and it was handed over to the college administration in 2010. At present, the college is having one new block with a two-story building, one administrative block, a large library, canteen, parking lot and a playground.

About the Seminar

Education is a process of facilitating learning, acquiring knowledge, skills, values, beliefs, and habits. It involves the development of intellectual, emotional, and social abilities, enabling individuals to understand and interact with the world around them. Education has the potential to empower individuals to become agents of change that will lead to a green transition in our societies. It aims to empower individuals to think critically, solve problems, communicate effectively, and make informed decisions. Moreover, education is a fundamental human right and a powerful tool for social justice. It has the potential to bridge gaps between different segments of society, reduce inequalities, and promote a more inclusive and cohesive world. Higher education is the engine that drives innovation, cultivates leadership, and bridges the gap between knowledge and application. It encompasses a diverse array of institutions and programs that provide the advanced skills and expertise necessary to address today's complex challenges and shape a more equitable future. In an era marked by rapid technological change, global interconnectivity, and shifting economic landscapes, higher education plays a critical role in equipping individuals with the tools to navigate and influence these transformations. Additionally, higher education is instrument in promoting social mobility and reducing inequalities. By providing access to quality education, the institutions empower individuals from diverse backgrounds to achieve their full potential and pursue their aspirations. In this way, higher education contributes to a more equitable and inclusive society.
